PRODUCTION PLEASED CROWD

ORATORIO PRONOUNCED A VERY CREDITABLE PERFORMANCE

Large Audience at Methodist Church Applauded "Esther, the Beautiful Queen."

The oratorio "Esther, the Beautiful Queen," was produced at the Methodist church last evening before a large and appreciative audience. The piece was costumed throughout and was rendered in acts and scenes upon a commodious stage constructed especially for the occasion which permitted the performance of the entire oratorio according to the original stage direc-

As a whole, the production was very that most of those in the cast are amalong histrionic lines. The singing was excellent, many of the voices displaying dramatic and artistic merit which might easily win laurels beyond the field of amateur perform-

Mrs F N Hess was heard to advantage in the role of Queen Esther, a part which she carried with marked success and dignity. She was especially effective in the solo number 'If It Seems Good Unto The King." and the duet with Mordecai, in the second act, "God is the Refuge." This duet was possibly the best rendered number of the program and was heart ily appreciated. The Queen's last solo in act five was also done with exceptional effect.

As Zeresh, the wife of Haman, Miss Rosalie Holberg won immediate favor with the audience and carried her role with more than amateu skill. Her beautiful and admirably trained voice was heard to advantage in all of her numbers, especially "Haste to the Banquet Hall," "Thy Galling Defeat, We Know it All," and the duet with Mordecal in the last The latter number was one of the better things of the evening.

Mrs. L. F. Brookshire, as the Prophetess, made much of her solo scene two of the first act; as did good attendance. Miss Annie S. Coleman in her number entitled "Thou Will Keep Him in Perfect Peace." Miss Coleman had the part of Mordecai's sister.

Miss Edna Richards and Miss Beatrice Jones were cast as maids to der, quite as much so as lamb, if be have been taken by Miss Annie Par- also makes the flavor more delicate,

Little Gladys Halsey, however, substituted in the role and did very cleverly

Owing to the sudden indisposition of Ware, the part Ahasuerus, ruler of Persia, was taken by A. G. Bixler of Denver, unde whose direction the oratorio was pro Mr. Bixler retains the remnants of a good voice, which, with his long experience and familiarity with the role, permitted him to portray this character very acceptably. The tip-pling scene between the king and Haman in the second act was appreciated.

The duet in this scene, "A Song of Joy," was very well done, both voice being heard to advantage. The king's duet with Queen Esther, "Long Live Our Beauteous Queen," was also commendable

E. C. Webster and N. O. Ogden were intrusted with the tenor roles of Mor decai and Haman, respectively, and several of their numbers were enjoyable, especially the duets already mentioned in connection with some of the other soloists.

E. A. Ryan, as a scribe; A. B. Smith, as a herald; J. W. Ramsey, as Harbonah; L. E. Lyman, as Hegal; and J. A. Clark as a high priest, had brief with varying success.

The children's chorus, "We Come creditable indeed, considering the fact | With a Few Bright Flowers," proved an exceptional treat, the gayly-attired ateurs with little or no experience little misses acquitting themselves with fully as much credit as did their elders. In their enthusiasm the presentation of flowers at the feet of the Queen proved to be more of a bombardment than an offering, one tot afterward admitting confidentially to her mate that she "hit her right on the nose." The scene, however, was much enjoyed, the audience insisting upon a repitition of it.

The entire production reflected much credit upon the directing ability of Mr. Bixler, as well as upon those whose time and labor made possible the successful rendition of the oratorio. Special comment should also be made upon the able manner in which the instrumental part of the performance was carried through. Miss Jessie Welch presided at the piano and filled this important position most acceptably.

"Queen Esther" will be repeated this evening at which time an even better performance of the oratorio will probably be given, owing to a greater familiarity with the lines and an increased confidence which always accompanies a second performance. An added attraction is announced in the promise of a vocal solo by Miss A. Rosalie Holberg, to be given during an intermission between two of the number, "Lo! O'er the Wicked," in acts. This, alone should insure a

To Make Mutton Like Lamb. Mutton chops can be made very tenderesh, and rendered their duet in fore they are bolled or fried they are the fourth act with success. The part allowed to simmer in just a little of Mizpah, Hanian's daughter, was to water on the back of the stove. This

GEO, R. SMITH JR. SHOOTS AL FRED LORENZO ROYLE.

Supposed Gun Was Not Loaded, Pulled Trigger, Awful and Instantaneous Death the Result.

The sad story of a boy with a sup osedly unloaded gun, fatally shooting his companion, has to be chronicled from the city this morning. As a result of the awful mistake, two familie are grief stricken and the lad who did the shooting is very sorry and sad. The accident occurred at the home George R. Smith, the tinner, at solo numbers which were rendered 3604 Jefferson avenue, at about 9 clock last evening. The boy who did the shooting is the son of Mr. George R. Smith, named George R. Smith, Jr. and the boy who was killed is the son of William Royle, 3650 Adams avenue, his name being Alfred Lorenzo Royle The Smith boy is 13 years old and the Royale boy 10.

According to the story told, a number of neighboring children were play ing in the back yard of the Smith home last evening when George Smith, picking up a shot gun, from which, he stated he thought the cartridge had been extracted aimed it at Alfred Royle and pulled the trigger. The gun was loaded and the deadly missile penetrated the body of the Royle be who fell dead upon the ground. Death was instantaneous, the doctor's examination disclosing the fact that the load of shot passed through the body of the unfortunate boy just above the heart, tearing a great hole on its way.

The other children and the boy who fired the shot, were horrified when they saw little Alfred fall dead and they hastened to tell the parents and the neighbors what had happened A doctor was called, but it availed nothing, the little fellow was dead be fore medical aid could reach him. dead body was tenderly carried to the home where it now lies in state. It being evident that the killing was purely accidental, the officers concluded that an inquest would not be

PROTECTION FROM THE FROST

SMUDGE-POTS WILL BE USED HERE NEXT YEAR.

Local Fruit Growers Learn of Great Success in Other Sections in Saving Fruit Crop.

According to statements made by members of the Ogden Fruit Growers ssociation today, local fruit farmers will in all probability provide themselves next year with smudge-pot protection against frost. There is little doubt that had these late invention been used last week during the two cold nights which resulted in considerable damage to the local fruit crop most of the trees would have been unlouched by the frost H. G. Fletcher, who wrote the letter is cashier of the Grand Junction organization, and he states that it was very cold for two nights in the vicinity of that city, in some districts the mercury registering as low as twentytwo degrees above zero. By using the orchard heaters, however, the temperature of the orchards was raised to thirty or thirty-four degrees and maintained throughout until morning. A very complete canvass has been made of the Grand Junction fruit district, and while the peach crop is damaged to some extent, apples and pears are practically unhurt.

"The writer had a very excellent opportunity," continues the letter, examine into the proficiency of the different heating pots that were used here and we know absolutely that our crops can be saved by orchard heat Next season I think we will not find an orchard in this whole section but what is provided for fighting frosts.' The experience of the Grand June tion growers will have considerable weight with Ogden growers as the local association was organized along the same lines as that of the Grand Junction association and members of the latter were here throughout the season of 1908 assisting Ogden grow-
